GLIDE: The Musical

Story, characters and medicine by the show's creator, a hand surgeon who really should have known better

Book & lyrics developed with Claude

Anatomy consultant: the left hand in question (uncredited, splinted, now fully flexed)

Mae, Wren, Dr Teo Okafor and Thea are fictional. Any resemblance to real surgeons, therapists or bagels is purely anatomical.

No tendons were harmed in the making of this programme. One was harmed in the making of the plot.

A Note from the Surgeon

I have said "never the bagel in your palm" to more patients than I can count. I have shown the photographs at Christmas parties. People have left early. So I would like to state, for the record, that this musical is entirely fictional, and that Mae is not me, and that I was holding an avocado.

Nobody writes songs about tendons, which is a shame, because the flexor tendon is the most romantic structure in the body. It is one line from the elbow to the fingertip. It lives in a wet tunnel, held to the bone by five fussy rings. When it is cut, its two halves fly apart. Then a surgeon stitches them back together in forty minutes, and everyone assumes that was the hard part.

It was not the hard part. The hard part is the twelve weeks afterwards, every hour, ten of each, in a splint you're desperate to be out of, under a therapist you can't out-argue. That's when the real drama happens, quietly, at the kitchen kettle.

Thank you for coming. Please switch off your phones. If you are eating a bagel in the interval, there are chopping boards at the bar.

Make a fist for me. Now open. Enjoy the show.

ACT ONE

7:45 on a Tuesday in October, inside the left hand of Mae, a hand surgeon and a busy mum. The holding hand is proud of itself. It grips the coffee, the phone, the lunchbox and Wren, and it has helped mend a thousand other hands. Up in his forearm castle, KING PROFUNDUS pulls and the fingers close. Down in the ring finger, PROX (his daughter) and TIP (the fingertip's boy) glide as one long-married tendon, called "Proxantip" by everybody. Above, Mae won't let Wren cut her own bagel. She holds it in her palm herself, and the knife slips. The deep tendon is cut in Zone Two, the stretch the old maps call No Man's Land. The King's recoil drags Prox back into the palm, and Tip slides away towards the end of the finger. Prox stops in the palm, not at the wrist, only because little LUMBO hangs on to her side. DIGBY the nerve has been cut too, and half of him has gone quiet.

That night Prox realises that she and Tip were always two. She refuses her father's "come home" and sets off back through No Man's Land. On Day Two the surgeon DR TEO OKAFOR, whom Mae trained, threads the couple back together while Mae lies awake on the table. THE PULLEYS have spent the night worrying about being vented. Tip haggles the repair up to six strands. One pulley gets a small nick, and the tendon glides. On Day Three THEA, the hand therapist, takes over. She makes a thermoplastic splint and lays down the rules: move early, place and hold, hand up high. To the King she says, "Pull with a whisper, Your Majesty." Then, on Day Ten, Wren trips on the stairs. Mae grabs her with the splinted hand and the King pulls with everything he has. The stitches creak and hold, just. That night the guilty King swears he will never pull again. Tip begs not to be moved. Mae decides to skip her exercises, and from the dark of No Man's Land a velvet voice purrs: hold still.

ACT TWO

For weeks three to five Mae tells clinic she is doing the exercises every hour. She isn't. SCARLETT ADHESION, the scar-tissue queen of No Man's Land, moves in with her backing trio THE FIBROBLASTS. She sings Tip to sleep against the tunnel wall, keeps the guilt-frozen King to his vow, and croons up to Mae herself about the cost of a rupture. Tip goes quiet. Meanwhile Digby the nerve sets off on a deadpan road trip back down the finger, a millimetre a day, and Thea tracks his tingle with her taps. Above, Wren cuts her own bagel on the board, and Mae lets her. At six weeks the splint comes off. Thea says "Make a fist for me", and the fingertip won't bend.

By week eight Teo is talking about a second operation. The King finally wants to act, and wants to rip Tip free in one almighty heave. Prox stops him. Not like Day Ten, not like never, but like this: she teaches her father the whisper. Thea's blocking exercises begin and a frightened Tip agrees to be pulled. Something flickers. Five degrees, then ten, then forty. Then it's week twelve, a January morning and the first day of term. The ring slides back over the knuckle, and all three daughters can close. The Pulleys take a bow, Lumbo is finally thanked, and Digby arrives more or less on time. Scarlett has been remodelled, not destroyed, and now faces the right way. At the school gate Mae ties a shoelace and lets go of a small hand. Then she says the final words of the show to her own hand.

Twelve Weeks in the Left Hand of Doctor Mae

Musical Numbers

ACT ONE

- 1 Got It In Hand The Company (the Holding Hand), Prox and Tip
- 2 Half of a Name (Proxantip) Prox, King Profundus, and the Company as Lumbo's patter chorus
- 3 Vent Me Not The Pulleys (Ay-four leading), Ay-one, and Tip
- 4 Make It Six, If You Love Me Prox, Tip, and the Company as theatre narrators (voicing Mae and Teo)
- 5 Thea's Rules Thea, King Profundus, and the Company as the waiting room
- 6 Day Ten Prox, King Profundus, and the Company

ACT TWO

- 7 Hold Still Scarlett Adhesion & The Fibroblasts, with Tip
- 8 A Millimetre a Day Digby, Thea, and the Company
- 9 A Little Further Prox, King Profundus, and the Company
- 10 Now Open The Company, Prox and Tip

Prox & Tip

THE PROXIMAL AND DISTAL STUMPS OF THE RING-FINGER FLEXOR DIGITORUM PROFUNDUS TENDON (TOGETHER: "PROXANTIP")

PROX (King's daughter, proximal stump) is thrilled to be back in No Man's Land, having last been seen there being dragged into the palm. Credits: Grip (Kettle Rep), Cutlery Drawer (understudy) and a long run in Typing. She can count to ten every hour and does. TIP (fingertip's boy, distal stump) has touched phones, noses and, regrettably, a bagel. Previous work: Pointing, Doorbell, and the closing beat of every fist you've ever made. He has never moved by himself and would prefer that not to come up. The couple have been married since before Mae could crawl and are now never more than three millimetres apart.

King Profundus

THE FLEXOR DIGITORUM PROFUNDUS MUSCLE, RULER OF THE FOREARM CASTLE

His Majesty returns to the stage after a long residency in the Forearm, where he has pulled every finger closed since birth. Credits: Gripping (Lead), The Steering Wheel (twice nightly) and the arm-wrestling scene in Christmas at the In-Laws. He has three daughters on one muscle belly, so when one is held back, nobody closes properly. He dislikes the word "subtle". He is learning the word "whisper". He would like it known that he did not mean to nearly tear anybody on Day Ten, and that he has been practising his library voice.

Scarlett Adhesion & The Fibroblasts

SCAR TISSUE IN THE WRONG PLACE, OUTLAW QUEEN OF NO MAN'S LAND, AND HER TRIO OF COLLAGEN-LAYING BUILDERS

SCARLETT has haunted the flexor sheath since the days of three weeks in plaster, which she still calls "the golden age". Credits: The Stiff Finger (long run), Rubber Bands of the 1970s (nostalgia tour) and Tenolysis: The Sequel. She is the only one in the kingdom who says "darling". THE FIBROBLASTS (Type Three, Type Three and Type Three) lay collagen every which way, with no plans, no ruler and no straight lines. They clock on whenever the moving stops. By the curtain call Scarlett has had work done and lines up neatly as Type One. Don't look so shocked.

Thea

THE HAND THERAPIST AND FAIRY GODMOTHER, A VOICE FROM ABOVE

Thea turns theatre plaster into thermoplastic the way other godmothers turn pumpkins into carriages, with a warm water bath and absolutely no sympathy. Credits: Dorsal Blocking Splint (designer), Place and Hold (choreographer) and Ten More, My Love (an ongoing series). Her wand is a goniometer. Nobody has ever been impressed by it. She is the only person Mae cannot out-argue, and she would like the surgeons in the audience to remember that the operation took forty minutes and the next twelve weeks were hers. Hand above your heart, my love. Not your belly button.

Digby & Lumbo

THE ULNAR DIGITAL NERVE OF THE RING FINGER, AND THE LUMBRICAL MUSCLE

DIGBY (ulnar digital nerve) was stitched last in theatre, with thread finer than a hair, and is touring the finger at a millimetre a day, more or less. Credits: Feeling Things (It's a Lot), Pins and Needles (one-man show), and an unfortunate ice-lolly season. He doesn't talk about his cousin, the neuroma. LUMBO (lumbrical) grows straight off Prox's side and is the reason she stopped in the palm and not at the wrist. Credits: Lumbrical Plus (a surprise hit), Paradoxical Extension and Nobody Knows What I Do. Tonight someone finally thanks him. He's not crying. He's a muscle.

The Pulleys

THE ANNULAR PULLEYS AY-ONE TO AY-FIVE, GATEKEEPERS OF THE FINGER TUNNEL

AY-TWO and AY-FOUR are grand dowagers and load-bearing, actually. They have held the tendon to the bone for decades and consider bowstringing a public scandal. Joint credits: Not Being Vented, Standards, and Whatever Would the Knuckles Say? Ay-four was vented a sliver on Day Two and has been dining out on it ever since. AY-ONE is cut for trigger finger every Tuesday under local and is past being surprised. AY-THREE and AY-FIVE share one line and would like it noted that nobody mentions them. Nobody mentions them in this bio either.

Mae, Wren & Dr Teo Okafor

THE HUMANS, HEARD ONLY AS VOICES FROM ABOVE

MAE is a hand surgeon, a mother and a terrible patient. Credits: Never the Bagel in Your Palm (lecture, three hundred performances) and, for one morning only, The Bagel in Her Palm. She wrote the protocol and has been told to do ten more. WREN is small, says very little and gets the bagel in the end, on the board. DR TEO OKAFOR was trained by Mae and returns the favour wide awake with no tourniquet. Credits: The Lightning-Bolt Incision, Four's the Minimum and Mae's Tuesday List (covering). He says "Now open" exactly the way she taught him.

Themes & Tips

RECURRING THEMES

- “Through the sheath and past the pulleys, / one line from the elbow to the fingertip.”
 The couple's wedding vow. It is sung whole in Song 1 and cut off mid-word by the knife. Prox sings it with the last word missing, and the Pulleys interrupt it. It's restored in harmony on the operating table, and Tip forgets the ending on Day Ten. It's sung whole again when the fist closes.
- “I never knew that we were two / until there was a space between.”
 Prox's discovery in Song 2. The space shrinks to 'three millimetres, never more' in theatre. Thea moves it to the gap between the tendon and the tunnel wall, and Scarlett threatens to fill it. Prox vows to 'keep it open', and in the finale 'we glide on the space between.'
- “Hold still, hold still, / nothing tears if nothing moves.”
 It starts as a mum's morning line to a wriggling child and becomes the villain's lullaby. Thea answers with 'Place and hold, and then let go', and Tip turns it: 'but nothing ever moves.' By the last scene it is just a shoelace again: 'Hold still... done. Go on.'
- “Make a fist for me. / Now open.”
 Mae's clinic catchphrase. Her trainee gives it back to her on the table, it fails when the splint comes off, and it brings the first flicker. In the show's last line she says it to herself.
- “A little further every day, / a millimetre, more or less.”
 Digby's deadpan nerve-regrowth road song (nerves really do grow about a millimetre a day). Prox picks it up and turns it into her plan for working Tip free.
- “Pull with a whisper, Your Majesty.”
 Thea's prescription for the King. He goes from pulling with everything to never pulling, until his daughter finally teaches him this.
- “Every hour. (Tap, tap.)”
 The rep count and Tinel's tap share one crisp double tick. Listen for it whenever someone counts, fibs about counting, or regrows.
- “Nobody mentions us.”

Ay-three and Ay-five, every time. They are correct.

FROM THEA'S CLINIC

- Hand above your heart, my love. Not your belly button. Swelling is glue.
- Little and often beats heroic and rare. Ten gentle reps every hour do far more good than one big heave at bedtime.
- Place and hold, and then let go. Holding the finger still is not the same as resting it.
- The splint is the wall at your back. Straight inside it, never past it, and don't take it off to 'just quickly' do the dishes.
- Days five to twenty-one are the weakest the repair will ever be. Feeling better doesn't mean it's stronger.
- Nerves regrow about a millimetre a day. Pins and needles are good news. Ice lollies can wait until spring.
- Doing them every hour? Good. I'll know if you aren't. The goniometer always knows.

In order of performance, with notes on what to listen for.

The Company (the Holding Hand), Prox and Tip

The scene. 7:45 on a Tuesday in October, inside the left hand of Doctor Mae. The kingdom shows off its anatomy, Mae saws a bagel in her palm, and the knife cuts the ring-finger tendon in Zone Two.

Listen for. A ticking-clock hi-hat counts down to the cut. The couple's 'one line from the elbow to the fingertip' hook breaks off mid-word at the knife. Also listen for Mae's catchphrase 'Make a fist for me. Now open', and the fast-rap roll call that names every structure in the finger.

INTRO — COMPANY

A Tuesday in October, a quarter to eight,

VERSE — COMPANY

Coffee in the left! (Check!)
Phone between the fingers! (Check!)
Lunchbox in the crook! (Check!)
and Wren across the road! (Mind the road!)
She's a surgeon of the hand,
we've mended a thousand hands.
The right hand gets the credit,
we just hold the retractor. (Thanks.)

PRE-CHORUS — COMPANY

She says, "Make a fist for me. Now open."
to a thousand hands.
(Make a fist!) (Now open!)
To a thousand hands!

CHORUS — COMPANY

We've got it in hand! (Got it in hand!)
The coffee, the keys, the phone and Wren!
Morning to night and round again,
we've got it in hand! (Hey!)
Not a drop, not a crumb, not a thing gets spilled,
we're the holding hand! (The holding hand!)

VERSE — COMPANY

Up in his forearm castle,
King Profundus says hello!
He doesn't do subtle, he doesn't do slow,
he PULLS, and the fingers close!
Three daughters on one muscle,
where one goes, all three go.
The ring one is his pride.
(Bit much.) (He heard that.)

POST-CHORUS — COMPANY

Prox-an-tip! Prox-an-tip!
The King's own girl and the fingertip's boy!
Prox-an-tip! Prox-an-tip!
So long together they forgot that they were two!

VERSE — PROX

I'm Prox, the King's own girl, born in the forearm, running deep,
all the way down to the end of the finger,
where my Tip is waiting for me.

VERSE — TIP

And I'm Tip, the fingertip's boy, Prox, it's me, I hold on at the very end,
right where the finger stops, I wait for you.
Married. It's a whole thing.

HOOK — COMPANY

Through the sheath and past the pulleys,
one line from the elbow to the fingertip.
Big Sister Superficialis splits in two and hugs Prox from beneath!

The Pulleys hold her to the bone, or else
she'd bowstring!

Lumbo, hi, nobody knows what he does!
Digby, ulnar side, feels everything! (It's a lot.)

CHORUS — COMPANY

We've got it in hand! (Got it in hand!)
The coffee, the keys, the phone and Wren!
Morning to night and round again,
we've got it in hand! (Hey!)
Not a drop, not a crumb, not a thing gets
spilled,
we're the holding hand! (The holding hand!)

HOOK — COMPANY

Through the sheath and past the pulleys,
one line from the elbow to the fingertip.

VERSE — COMPANY

Every patient, every Christmas, she shows the photos on her phone! (Ew!)
Never the avocado,
never the bagel in your palm!
Every clinic, every party, says it slow and says it twice:
never the avocado,
never the bagel in your palm! (Say it!)

BRIDGE — COMPANY

She says, "Wren, hold still! Sun cream!
Shoes on!"

Wren says, "I can cut it!"

Mae says, "Knives are sharp. Give it here, you'll be late."

BUILD — COMPANY

And she holds the bagel in her palm,
the ring finger curled around,
the clock on the wall, the knife in her right,
sawing, sawing down...
(got it in hand... got it in hand...)

FINAL HOOK — PROX & TIP

Through the sheath and past the pulleys,
one line from the elbow to the-

INTERLUDE — PROX

Tip? ...Tip?
It's me, it's Prox, where did you go?
And faint from the end of the finger,
he calls back, "Prox? ...Prox?"

VERSE — COMPANY

And the King roars, "Come home! Come home!"
The King hauls back his daughter,
he drags her to the palm,
and as Mae opens up her hand,
Tip slides away, away, down, down the finger
to the end of the world.

VERSE — COMPANY

And Digby whispers, "Half of me's gone quiet."
Mae looks at the cascade, holds the middle joint, says, "Bend the tip."
...Nothing.

BREAKDOWN — COMPANY

Zone Two! No Man's Land!

OUTRO — COMPANY

And Mae says, "Of course it's Zone Two."

Half of a Name (Proxantip)

Prox, King Profundus, and the Company as Lumbo's patter chorus

The scene. Day nought, in the dark of the palm. Prox finds she and Tip were always two, refuses her father's 'Come home', and sets off back through No Man's Land, with Lumbo along because he's attached.

Listen for. The 'space between' chorus first appears here. In the patter, every time the King heaves the finger goes straighter, not bent: that's lumbrical plus, a real sign. Also: 'Nearer three centimetres, technically.'

INTRO — COMPANY

Day nought, the dark of the palm, the finger in a bandage, and Mae can't sleep.

VERSE — PROX

Hi. I'm Prox. Well, half of it.
The King's girl, from up the arm.
One knife, one bagel, one very bad
Tuesday,
and Papa yanked me back into the palm like a blind on a string.
Half of a name on the door,
and the other half's not home.

PATTER — COMPANY

Lumbo! Lumbo! The worm on her side!
He grows off her flank and he's down for the ride!
He held on, he held on, that's why she stopped in the palm,
and not at the wrist! Not at the wrist!
Nobody ever thanks the lumbrical!

CALL — KING PROFUNDUS

Prox! It's your father! Come home!
Up the tunnel, up the arm, back where you belong!
I'll heave with every fibre in the forearm, I'll pull and I'll pull till you're home with me!
Prox! Come HOME!

PATTER — COMPANY

Lumbo! He's pulling, he's pulling, he's pulling,
and the finger goes straight when it ought to be curling!
The King pulls on her and she pulls on him, and he's tied to the extensor hood, limb to limb,
so the harder he heaves, the straighter it goes!
Paradoxical extension, Mae says. Lovely.
Lumbrical plus! Nobody knows what he does,
and NOW they do!
(Lumbo's sorry! Sorry!)

VERSE — PROX

Me and Tip, they said us as one word, Proxantip,
since before Mae learned to crawl.
Same tunnel, same timing, same side of the bed.
I pulled, he curled the very tip,
and we never thought at all.
Now he's slid away down the finger, nearly to the end of the world.
And the thing about Tip?
He's never moved by himself. Not once.
He only bends when I pull.

PRE-CHORUS — PROX

And I pull, and nothing answers.
I pull, and the tunnel's empty.
Through the sheath and past the pulleys,
one line from the elbow to the...

CHORUS — PROX

I never knew that we were two
until there was a space between.
An empty tunnel where he should be,
the longest inch I've ever seen.
I never knew that we were two
until there was a space between.

POST-CHORUS — COMPANY

We were two. (Ooh.)
We were two,
and I never even counted.
(One... two...)
Turns out it's two.
Nearer three centimetres, technically.

VERSE — COMPANY

Thank you, Lumbo. Noted.
So I'm going back down the tunnel, back past the rings, one by one,
through No Man's Land on the old map,
to the boy at the end of the world.
I can't move without Papa,
and Tip can't move without me.
Papa won't come. Tip can't come.
So, fine. It's me.
How, exactly?

BRIDGE — KING PROFUNDUS

Prox, it's Papa. Come home, my girl, stay where it's safe,
up in the forearm, close to me.
No Man's Land is no place for a daughter of mine,
and I've lost one half of the name already.
Come home, my girl, stay where it's safe.

BRIDGE — PROX

It's Prox, Papa. Listen to me.
I came when you called. I always came.
But this time the pulling's the problem.
You pulled me here, Papa.
You can't pull me home.

PATTER — COMPANY

Lumbo! Finger's gone straight again, Your Majesty!
Just so you know! Just so you know!
And news from Above, the news from Above!
The surgeon comes on Thursday! Day two!

KEY CHANGE — COMPANY

Day two!

FINAL CHORUS — PROX

I never knew that we were two
until there was a space between.
Wait for me, Tip. You can't go far.
I'm coming down through No Man's Land.
I never knew that we were two
until there was a space between.

POST-CHORUS — PROX

We were two! (We were two!)
Every pulley, every inch,
and this time I'm counting!
(One! Two!)

OUTRO — COMPANY

And Lumbo comes too. He has to. He's attached.

TAG — COMPANY

Day two.

Vent Me Not

The Pulleys (Ay-four leading), Ay-one, and Tip

The scene. Day one, in the finger tunnel. The pulley dowagers panic that tomorrow's surgeon will vent them. Tip shows off, then admits he has never moved by himself. A whispered warning introduces Scarlett Adhesion.

Listen for. A mock-operetta patter song. The rule 'Ay-four, or a little of Ay-two, but NEVER both' is real surgical teaching. Ay-one's deadpan Tuesday trigger fingers, and Ay-three and Ay-five sulking that 'Nobody mentions us'.

VERSE — COMPANY

Day one, the finger tunnel,
and the pulleys cannot sleep!
Five little rings to hold her close,
and a reputation to keep!

PATTER — AY-FOUR (WITH AY-TWO), THE DOWAGER PULLEYS

I'm Ay-four, my dear, and I'm load-bearing, actually!
Have you heard? Have you HEARD?
There's a surgeon in tomorrow!
Oh, the horror! Oh, the scalp! Oh,
the sorrow, sorrow, sorrow!
He may VENT us! Vent us, sister?
A little slit to let her through!
A little slit in ME, Ay-two?
Or a little slit in YOU?

BREAK — COMPANY

Calm down, says Ay-one. I get cut every week.
Tuesday. Trigger finger. Local. Again.
At least it wasn't a rugby shirt.

PRE-CHORUS — AY-FOUR (WITH AY-TWO), THE DOWAGER PULLEYS

And if he must, and if he MUST,
then which of us? (Not me!)
And if he must, and if he MUST,
then which of us? (Not ME!)

CHORUS — AY-FOUR (WITH AY-TWO), THE DOWAGER PULLEYS

Vent me not! (Vent HER!)
Not me, not me!
Take a sliver off somebody else!
Vent me not! (Vent HER!)
Not me, not me!
I'm load-bearing, actually!
Ay-four, or a little of Ay-two, my dear,
but NEVER both. We have standards!
(We have STANDARDS!)

PATTER — AY-FOUR (WITH AY-TWO), THE DOWAGER PULLEYS

Cut us both and off she sails, clean off the bone, a BOWSTRING!
(Bowstring!)
Every time the finger bends she'd stand out like a harp string! (Twang!)
Lifting off the bone in PUBLIC!
Lifting off the bone in PUBLIC!
Whatever would the knuckles say?
What WOULD the knuckles say?

POST-CHORUS — AY-FOUR (WITH AY-TWO), THE DOWAGER PULLEYS

Vent me not! (Vent HER!)
Not me, not me!
Take a sliver off somebody else!
I'm load-bearing, actually!

BREAK — COMPANY

Nobody mentions us.

VERSE — TIP

Evening, ladies. Tip.
The fingertip's boy, from the end of the world.
Through the sheath and past the-
"Us, dear," says Ay-four. "US."
I'm the bit that touches EVERYTHING.
Phones. Noses. I've been in a bagel.
And the pulleys mutter, "That's how we got into this."
Last stop on the line, top of the bill, every fist you've ever made finishes with me!

BRIDGE — TIP

But ladies, quick confession,
now the tunnel's gone so still.
I've never moved. Not once. Not by myself.
I only bend when Prox pulls.
And she's up there in the palm,
and I'm down here by Ay-four..
"By me? Oh, poor boy," she coos. "Poor boy."
...and I don't know the way to her.

DROP — COMPANY

On old Doctor Bunnell's map
they call it No Man's Land.
Zone Two, from the crease of the palm to where Big Sister lands.
Tight little tunnel, close little walls,
and someone's moved in there.
Her name is Scarlett Adhesion.
Scarlett Adhesion... she moves into any space that stops moving.

PRE-CHORUS — TIP

Right then, ladies, it's Tip. I'll just keep moving.
And Ay-four sighs, "You just said you can't,
dear."
...Ah.
Alright, Ay-four, I'll say it:
so let the surgeon come tomorrow,
let him fetch her from the palm.

PRE-CHORUS — AY-FOUR (WITH AY-TWO), THE DOWAGER PULLEYS

Oh, poor boy, it's Ay-four, I'll say it too:
let him thread her back beneath us with his needle and his calm!
Vent us gently, if he must, my dear!

FINAL CHORUS — AY-FOUR (WITH AY-TWO), THE DOWAGER PULLEYS

Vent me not! (Vent HER!)
Not me, not me!
Take a sliver off somebody else!
Vent me not! (Vent HER!)
Not me, not me!
I'm load-bearing, actually!
Ay-four, or a little of Ay-two, my dear,
but NEVER both. We have standards!
(We have STANDARDS!)

TAG — COMPANY

Vent Ay-four. She'll be fine.

OUTRO — AY-FOUR (WITH AY-TWO), THE DOWAGER PULLEYS

How DARE you!
How DARE you, my dear!
I'm load-bearing, actually!
VENT... ME... NOT!

TAG — COMPANY

Nobody mentions us.

Make It Six, If You Love Me

Prox, Tip, and the Company as theatre narrators (voicing Mae and Teo)

The scene. Day two, in theatre, with Mae wide awake. Teo threads Prox back down on a borrowed children's-ward tube, finds Tip, and remarries them with a multi-strand repair. A pulley gets a sliver vented, and the tendon glides.

Listen for. The love song is a strand count: one for the kettle, one for the car, one for Wren. Teo's 'Now open', given back to the woman who taught it to him. Digby is stitched last, 'with thread finer than a hair'.

INTRO — COMPANY

(Ooh... ooh...)

VERSE — COMPANY

Day two, the theatre lights,
and Mae is wide awake.
No tourniquet, no sleep,
just a needle of local and a steady hand.
Teo, the boy she trained, draws a lightning bolt,
zig, then zag, the way she taught him,
a little window in the palm,
and there she is, the King's girl, waiting in the dark.

VERSE — PROX

Okay. Something's got me... it's me, Prox, going down. Gentle. Slow.
A slim little tube, and I'm going down,
under the pulleys, mind your heads,
a needle pins me like a butterfly,
so Papa can't reel me back to the palm.
Sorry, Papa. Not today.

INTERLUDE — COMPANY

(Borrowed from the children's ward.)
Now where's the other end?
Bend the tip down for him, Mae...
There you are. You ran.

VERSE — TIP

Prox, I didn't run, I slid! Big difference!
Tip. Fingertip. End of the world. Hi.
We've been married since before she learned to crawl.
Prox? You came the whole way down?
And she says, "Through No Man's Land, Tip. I said I would."
You've got a needle through you.
And Prox just shrugs, "It's a look."

PRE-CHORUS — TIP

And Mae says, "Four strands, Teo," and Teo says, "Four's the minimum."
Four? The minimum? Come on, Teo!
Make it six, if you love me!

PRE-CHORUS END — COMPANY

Six, then.

CHORUS — TIP

One for the morning, one for the dark,
one for the kettle, one for the car,
one for the phone, and one for Wren,
make it six, make it six, if you love me.

CHORUS END — COMPANY

And a running stitch around the edge, so nothing catches on the way.
(Make it six... make it six, if you love me.)

VERSE — PROX

Tip, I never knew that we were two until there was a space between.
And Tip says, "Prox, now there's barely a space between,
three millimetres, never more."
He frowns, "Three millimetres. Is that a lot?"
It's a gap, Tip. Not a divorce.

BREAKDOWN — COMPANY

Make a fist for me.
Hang on! We're caught on the edge of Ayfour!
Only Ay-four! Spare the Ay-two!
I KNEW it.
Just a sliver. Again.
Make a fist for me.

BREAKDOWN RELEASE — PROX

Mae says, "I've said that to a thousand patients." And Teo says, "Then you know the next bit...
Now open."
And Mae breathes, "Oh. There it is."

FINAL CHORUS — PROX

Through the sheath and past the pulleys,
one line from the elbow to the fingertip.
One for the morning, one for the dark,
one for the kettle, one for the car,
one for the phone, and one for Wren,
gliding, gliding, down and back again,
three millimetres, never more!
And that... makes... SIX!

POST-CHORUS — TIP

Make it six... make it six, if you love me.
Prox, my love, are you sure that's six?
And Prox laughs, "Tip. It IS six."
Just checking.

CODA — COMPANY

And last, the little nerve, Digby, with thread finer than a hair.

OUTRO — PROX & TIP

Home in plaster, hand held high, hand held high.

Thea's Rules

Thea, King Profundus, and the Company as the waiting room

The scene. Day three, in the hand therapy clinic. Thea punctures the post-op glow, moulds a thermoplastic dorsal blocking splint and lays down the rules. The King is told to pull with a whisper.

Listen for. A brassy swing number. Listen for 'Stitched isn't healed', the spelling bee, 'Ooh, Miss! Me, Miss!' (patients holding their hands above their hearts), and 'Tear it, or glue it.' 'A wall at your back, and an open road ahead' is sung once and only once in the show.

INTRO — THEA

Day three, the clinic, I'm Thea, my love, and the water bath is warm!

Sit down, my love, hand on the towel,
and wipe that glow off your face.

VERSE — THEA

Stitched isn't healed, my love.
Stitched is day two. Healed is January.
I heard about the theatre lights,
the strings, the soppy vows,
six strands and a running stitch,
very sweet. Now take a bow.
Lovely. Here's the boring bit:
the space between that matters now is you and the tunnel wall, a drop of water wide.

PRE-CHORUS — COMPANY

Not just together... gliding?
Not just together. Gliding.

VERSE — THEA

Off with the plaster, the heavy old slab, it's had a lovely run.

In goes the sheet to the water bath, out like a warm lasagne!

A pumpkin to a carriage, love!

I mould it to the back,
wrist at rest and knuckles bent, fingers straight along the track.

A wall at your back,
and an open road ahead.

And this is my wand, my love:
a goniometer. Nobody's ever impressed.

Dorsal blocking splint, my love!

She makes her juniors spell it? Go on, then!

CHANT — COMPANY

D! O! R! S! A! L!

B! L! O! C...

INTERLUDE — THEA

We'll be here till January.

Lovely spelling, all of you.

Gold star, and a sticker.

Right, then. The rules.

CHORUS — THEA

These are my rules! (Thea's rules!)
 Move it early! (Move it early!)
 The good hand bends it down for you,
 place and hold, and then let go.
 Straight inside the splint, my love,
 but never, never past it!
 Every hour, ten of each!

POST-CHORUS — COMPANY

Little and often! Gentle and slow!
 Place and hold, and then let go!
 Hand up high, never past the wall,
 these are the rules! Thea's rules!

VERSE — THEA

Hand above your heart!
 "It's in a sling, it's fine," she says?
 Your heart, my love, not your belly button!
 Look round my waiting room:
 every hand held up like they've got a question.

HOOK — COMPANY

Ooh, ooh, Miss! Me, Miss!

VERSE — THEA

Swelling is glue, my love! (Swelling is glue!)
 "My old boss swore by rubber bands?"
 No more rubber bands!
 "I wrote the protocol!" I've read it. Ten more.
 In here you're not the surgeon, my love.
 You're the hand.
 The operation took him forty minutes.
 The next twelve weeks are mine.

VERSE — KING PROFUNDUS

Make way! The King of the Forearm!
 The mightiest muscle in the land is here!
 Twelve weeks? I'll have it done by teatime!
 I'll close that finger in one almighty heave!
 Stand back, physio! Watch me pull!

Sit down, Your Majesty.
 Pull with a whisper, Your Majesty.
 And the King goes quiet and whispers,
 "A... whisper? Me? The King?"
 Library voice, love. Every hour.

HOOK — COMPANY

Pull with a whisper, Your Majesty!

BRIDGE — THEA

Now hush, all of you. Listen.
 Day five to day twenty-one,
 the repair is the weakest
 it will ever, ever be.
 Move, and you mend from the inside,
 fed by the water in the tunnel.
 Sit still, and the walls send builders,
 and builders build every which way.
 Two ways to lose a tendon:
 tear it, or glue it.

BRIDGE ECHO — COMPANY

Tear it... or glue it.

BREAK — THEA

Hear that, love? Down in the tunnel.
 Somebody's knocking.
 (Tap, tap.) Anyone down there?
 That's Digby, love, on his way.

FINAL CHORUS — THEA

These are my rules! (Thea's rules!)
 Place and hold, and then let go.
 Every hour! Ten of each!
 Sing it with me, Your Majesty!

FINAL CHORUS — THEA & KING PROFUNDUS

Don't tear it! Don't glue it!
 Little and often, gentle and slow,
 hand up high, never past the wall,
 these are the rules! These are the rules!

POST-CHORUS — COMPANY

Little and often! Gentle and slow!

OUTRO — THEA

And Mae says, "Fine. FINE. Every hour."

Lovely.

Ten more, my love.

One... two...

(Tap, tap.)

Day Ten

Prox, King Profundus, and the Company

The scene. Day ten. The skin stitches come out and the exercises are going beautifully, until Wren trips on the stairs and the King pulls with everything. The repair holds, just. Act One ends with the King's vow, Tip's fear, and a velvet voice in the dark.

Listen for. 'One, and hold. Two, and rest' counts the real exercise rhythm. 'Hold still', what Mae says to Wren every morning in Song 1, comes back as a stranger's lullaby. The act ends on a question: tear, or glue?

INTRO — COMPANY

Day ten. The skin stitches came out today.
The tendon ones never will.
Hey!

VERSE — PROX

Every hour Papa pulls a little way, and Tip comes gliding home.
Straight inside the splint and never past it.
I'm Prox, and honestly? I could do this in my sleep.

INTERLUDE — COMPANY

Don't do it in your sleep!

VERSE — PROX

Tip says, "Six strands, as promised, neat and tight.
Theirs came out. Mine stay in. I'm told that's normal."
He's never felt so well dressed for a bit that pokes the phone.

PRE-CHORUS — COMPANY

One, and hold. Two, and rest.
One, and hold. Two, and rest.
Day five to twenty-one, the weakest days,
so gently, gently...

CHORUS — PROX

Papa pulls, and Tip comes too, and I count for both of us!
Every hour! (Every hour!)
One, and hold, two, and rest,
every hour! (Every hour!)
Hand up high, and never past the wall, ten days old and on the mend,
and frankly, I'm a natural!

BUILD — COMPANY

Mae calls, "Wren! Shoes! We're late!
Stairs, carefully!"

PRE-CHORUS — COMPANY

Day ten, the stairs, the girl, the grab!
Day ten, the stairs, the girl, the grab!

BREAK — COMPANY

And the little girl cries "Mum!"
She grabs the girl with the splinted hand!

CHORUS — KING PROFUNDUS

I've got the girl! Your father's got her!
Every fibre, every ounce!
Pull with all I own, from the elbow down!
I've got the girl! I've got the girl!

RESPONSE — COMPANY

Not like that, Papa!
Too hard! We're ten days old!
Let go, Papa, Mae's got her now!
Let go, let go, before something gives!
Six strands creak...
...and hold. Just.

BREAK — PROX

Tip? Tip, it's Prox. Talk to me.
Six strands, are you still there?
And Tip, so small, says, "Still here. Ow."
Still here. Oh, thank goodness. Still here.
Day ten, the night, and no one sleeps.
Prox, it's your father. I nearly tore her.
I nearly tore her, my Prox.
I will never pull again.
Never again, my girl.
Your papa will not pull.
We have to move, Papa.
Every hour, Thea said.
Gently. Every hour. Tear it, or glue it.
But Tip says, "Don't move me. I'm scared."
Tip, keep going. Through the sheath, past the...
One line, Tip, one line...
from the elbow to the...
He says, "I can't remember the end."

VERSE — COMPANY

Ten o'clock, the kettle's cold,
the hand is throbbing, propped up high.
She nearly snapped it on the stairs, and Mae says, "Maybe I'll skip them tonight. Hold still."
Hold still, hold still,
nothing tears if nothing moves.
Hold still, hold still,
nothing tears if nothing moves.

PRE-CHORUS — PROX

Tip, who's there? That's No Man's Land.
And Tip just murmurs, "She sounds kind."
Papa won't pull. Tip won't move.
Mae's turned the light out, hand on a pillow.
Fine. Fine.
Somebody round here has to count.

FINAL CHORUS — PROX

If you won't pull, Papa, and he won't move, then I'll count for both of us!
Every hour! Every hour!
One, and hold, two, and rest,
every hour!

CALL — COMPANY

Tear? Or glue?

FINAL CHORUS — COMPANY

And Papa roars, "Never! Never, my Prox!" Papa, please! And Tip begs, "Don't move
me!"
Never, he says, and Don't, says Tip, and the clock on the wall says every hour.
Hold still...

FINAL CHORUS — PROX

One, and hold! Two, and rest!
I said I'd do it in my sleep,
so nobody's sleeping!
Ten days old, and I can count to ten!
Eeev-ery hour!

OUTRO — COMPANY

Tear?
Or glue?

Hold Still

Scarlett Adhesion & The Fibroblasts, with Tip

The scene. Weeks three to five. Mae fibs at clinic, and Scarlett takes No Man's Land. She seduces Tip, the guilty King and Mae herself (reading her own papers at 3 a.m.), and Tip agrees to stay still 'just for a while'.

Listen for. Electro-swing, with a sliding sub-bass, muted trumpet and finger snaps. The Fibroblasts lay Type Three collagen 'every which way'. Scarlett is nostalgic for 'those darling rubber bands', the old splints that left curled-up stiff fingers. 'There won't be any space between. I'll fill it, darling.'

INTRO — COMPANY

Week three, week four,
the kingdom's gone so quiet.
(Shh... shh...)

"Doing them every hour?"

"Every hour."

Mm-hm. She isn't.

VERSE — SCARLETT ADHESION

Don't scream, darling. I'm nobody new.
They call me Scarlett. Scarlett Adhesion.
(Ad-he-sion!)

The splint is on, the lights are low, and nobody's pulling tonight.
Scar tissue, in the wrong place.
Queen of No Man's Land.
Any space that stops moving?
Mine.

PRE-CHORUS — SCARLETT ADHESION

Every wound sends for me, darling.
Healing needs me.
Somebody has to hold it shut.
(Somebody has to!)

Might as well be me.

CHORUS — SCARLETT ADHESION

Hold still, hold still,
nothing tears if nothing moves.
(Shh... shh...)

Lie down in the dark of the tunnel, let me glue you to the wall.

Hold still, hold still,
nothing tears if nothing moves.
(Nothing tears! Nothing moves!)

POST-CHORUS — COMPANY

Every which way! Mm!
Every which way! Mm!

VERSE — COMPANY

We're the builders from the walls,
we clock on when the moving stops.
Collagen, Type Three, Type Three,
no plans, no ruler, no straight lines, crossways, sideways, any old how,
ooh, lovely and thick!

VERSE — SCARLETT ADHESION

Lovely and thick, darling. Thank you, girls.
Swelling's my advance guard, darling.
Let that hand hang down by her side...
Swelling is glue. And the glue is me.
And that fairy with the wand?
Twenty minutes, once a fortnight.
I'm here all night.

VERSE — TIP

It's Tip... I heard the strands creak on the stairs.

I've never moved by myself. Not once.

It's warm down here, and the wall is soft, and I'm so tired of being brave.

Scarlett, but Prox says every hour...

VERSE — SCARLETT ADHESION

Then don't, darling. Scarlett's got you.

I'll hold you so tight you could never tear.

Every hour? Oh, Tip.

Look what moving did on Day Ten.

(Ooh. Awkward.)

VERSE — SCARLETT ADHESION

And you, up in your castle, you nearly tore her, Your Majesty.

"I felt her stretch," he says, "I felt her creak."

You swore it on the stairs, Your Majesty:

"No pull at all. Not even a whisper."

Never pull again, Your Majesty.

VERSE — SCARLETT ADHESION

And you, up there, with your phone light on, reading your own old papers at three a.m.

You of all people know what a rupture costs.

Back to theatre. Graft. Two stages.

"Just tonight," she says.

Hold still, Doctor.

Hold still, Doctor.

BRIDGE — SCARLETT ADHESION

Three weeks in plaster, those were the days...

And those darling rubber bands,
a hook on the nail and a band to the wrist,
they kept you curled so sweetly,
curled up stiff for the rest of your life...

Now it's all "early active motion", six strands, a therapist, a little plastic wand...

Movement, darling! How vulgar.
(How vulgar!)

VERSE — TIP

Prox, it's Tip. I can hear you calling.

Just for a while, Prox.

Just till I'm brave.

Just for a while...

I'll come when I'm brave.

INTERLUDE — COMPANY

Round and round, to the tunnel wall,
round and round, to the tunnel wall.

VERSE — SCARLETT ADHESION

Hush now, darling. Scarlett's here.

There won't be any space between.

I'll fill it, darling.

Every inch of it. Mine.

FINAL CHORUS — SCARLETT ADHESION

Hold still, hold still,
nothing tears if nothing moves.
(Shh... shh...)

Sleep now in the dark of the tunnel, snug as a scar on the wall.

Hold still, hold still,
nothing tears if nothing moves.
(Every which way... every which way...)

OUTRO — COMPANY

Tip?
...Tip?

OUTRO — SCARLETT ADHESION

Hear that, darling? Scarlett hears it too.

That's your Prox calling, darling.

Don't answer.

Hold still.

A Millimetre a Day

Digby, Thea, and the Company

The scene. Weeks four to six. Digby's deadpan road trip down the finger as the nerve regrows, tracked by Thea's taps. Wren does the bagel on the board. The splint comes off at six weeks, and the fingertip won't bend.

Listen for. A laid-back country-pop shuffle, with the 'tap, tap' of Tinel's sign. Listen for postcards from the middle bone, the cousin who became a neuroma, and the other fingers asking 'Why can't WE close, Father?' (the quadriga effect).

INTRO — COMPANY

(Tap, tap.)

VERSE — DIGBY

Week four, and the tingle's on the move.
Name's Digby. Digital nerve.
My side of the family's ulnar.
Ring and little. We keep ourselves to ourselves.

They stitched me last in theatre,
with a thread finer than a hair.
Packed a bag, no sat-nav,
I'll get there when I get there.

PRE-CHORUS — DIGBY

The old wires downstream packed up and left,
but they left me the tunnels,
so I'm following the signs,
one little road sign at a time.

CHORUS — DIGBY

A little further every day, (tap, tap!)
a millimetre, more or less. (Hey!)
You can't rush a nerve, my friend.
I'd only get lost. (He'd only get lost!)
A little further every day, (tap, tap!)

POST-CHORUS — COMPANY

Ooh, more or less! (Tap, tap!)
Ooh, more or less! (Hey!)

VERSE — THEA

It's Thea, my love. Every week I tap from the fingertip
back towards the scar,
and where he tingles, that's how far.
(Tap, tap.) Tingle there? And Digby mutters, "Not yet, ma'am."
(Tap, tap.) There, my love? Again he says,
"Not yet, ma'am."
(Tap, tap.) There? And up he jumps: "Ooh!
That's me! That's ME!"
Tee-nell's sign, my love. Write it down.
He's moving. He's moving!

CHORUS — DIGBY

Thank you, ma'am! A little further every day, (tap, tap!)
a millimetre, more or less. (Hey!)
Tap, tap, that's the front of me.
The rest of me's a guess.

VERSE — DIGBY

Postcard from the middle bone:
weather's numb, wish you could feel it here.
Next stop, the last joint.
I'll reach the fingertip by New Year.
Ice lollies? Hateful, all winter.
Lucky it's November.
Cousin took a wrong turn at a scar once.
Neuroma now. We don't talk about him.

VERSE 3 TAG — DIGBY

Then Thea lays a paperclip on the pulp:
"Two points. Five millimetres?"
Ask me next year, Thea.
Not heard from Tip in a fortnight.
Quiet lad, these days.

BRIDGE — DIGBY

Up above, the little one says,
"I'll do the bagel, Mum. On the board," and Mae says, "Go on, then,"
and sits on her right hand, just in case.
And Teo's doing Mae's Tuesday list.
She's taking it well. (She's not.)

CHORUS — DIGBY

A little further every day, (tap, tap!)
a millimetre, more or less. (Hey!)
From the scar down to the fingertip, it's a long old space between.
A little further every day, (tap, tap!)

VERSE — DIGBY

Six weeks, the splint comes off.
The whole hand holds its breath.
Thea pulls her chair in by the window, and she leans in close and says...

VERSE — THEA

It's Thea, my love. The splint is off.
Make a fist for me, my love.
Slowly now. Make a fist for me.
Pull, Your Majesty. Pull, Prox. All the way down.
Make a fist for me, my love.

VERSE — COMPANY

Right you are, Thea. Splint off, she says pull,
and the King, for once, does as he's told.
Even the King pulls. Prox pulls.
Tip won't come.
The fingertip won't bend.
And middle and little stop short beside her,
calling up the arm.
(Why can't WE close, Father?)

Oh.
Nobody told me about that.
...I'll just keep driving, then.
Down in the palm, Prox sings my road song back, slow...

OUTRO — COMPANY

A little further every day,
a millimetre, more or less.
A little further every day...

A Little Further

Prox, King Profundus, and the Company

The scene. Week eight. The tendon is stuck, not snapped, and a second operation is being mentioned. The King wants to rip Tip loose. Instead Prox teaches him to pull with a whisper, Tip agrees to be pulled, and the fingertip moves.

Listen for. The eleven-o'clock number. Prox borrows Digby's road-song as her method, and 'Not like Day Ten. Not like never. Like this.' Tip turns the villain's hook: 'Nothing tears if nothing moves, but nothing ever moves.' Five degrees has never sounded so big.

INTRO — COMPANY

(Every hour... every hour...)

VERSE — PROX

Week eight. I'm Prox, the King's daughter, and the fingertip still won't bend.
The splint is off, the lamps are low,
and Tip is wound in Scarlett's thread.
I call down the tunnel,
"Tip, it's me, Prox..."
Not a word, not a flicker.
Eight weeks of "any minute now."
It's been a lot of minutes.

PRE-CHORUS — PROX

Teo says, "Passive's full. Active's nothing.
Stuck, not snapped.
Give it three months... then maybe a
tenolysis,
if she'd do the therapy after."
Her good hand bends him fine, but he won't come when I call.

VERSE — PROX

Then Mae says, "I am NOT having a
tenolysis.
Do you know what I tell people about
tenolysis?"
And then, so quiet: "Right. Every hour."

HOOK — COMPANY

Every hour... every hour...

VERSE — KING PROFUNDUS

Prox! It's your father, the King, in the castle!

Eight weeks I swore I'd never pull again,
and look at him now, glued to the wall!
So I'll heave with everything I've got,
I'll rip him loose, I'll tear that thread,
one almighty pull from the forearm down,
and your boy comes home tonight!
Stand aside, my girl! Here I come!

VERSE — PROX

No, Papa. That's how a stuck thing snaps.
Not like Day Ten. Not like never.
Like this.
And Papa leans in and whispers, "Like this?"
Softer, Papa. Yes. And again.
And again. Don't look so smug.

CHORUS — PROX

A little further every day,
a millimetre, more or less.
I never knew that we were two
so I'll keep it open, the space between.
Like this. Like this.
Not like Day Ten, not like never,
like this.

INTERLUDE — COMPANY

Hold still... hold still...
Nothing tears if nothing moves.
Eight weeks, darling. He's mine.
Wrapped up nicely in time for Christmas.

VERSE — PROX

But Thea says, "Not hold still.

BRIDGE — COMPANY

Hold the middle joint.
Bend just the tip.
One... and rest, my love.
Two... and rest.
Ten of those, and then the kettle.
(Then ten more while it boils.)

BRIDGE — PROX

And faint down the tunnel I hear him:
"Prox? I heard you.
Nothing tears if nothing moves,
but nothing ever moves.
Pull me, Prox. Gently.
I'm scared. Pull me anyway."

BRIDGE — COMPANY

Pull with a whisper, Your Majesty.

BRIDGE — KING PROFUNDUS

Alright, my girl. Your father's listening.
Here it comes, the smallest pull I own.
Not a heave, not a yank, not a roar,
the way you'd lift a sleeping child,
a little further... and then I wait.
A little further... and then I wait.

BRIDGE — COMPANY

Darling... don't you dare...

BREAK — COMPANY

Make a fist for me.

BUILD — COMPANY

He moved! He moved!

BUILD — PROX

Five degrees. Mae whispers, "I'll take five."

BUILD — COMPANY

Five degrees! Then ten! Then twenty! Forty!
Ten at the kettle! Ten at the school run!
The first bend since the scar set in!

PRE-CHORUS — PROX

"Don't get cocky," Thea laughs,
"same again at four."

FINAL CHORUS — PROX

A little further every day,
a millimetre, more or less!
I never knew that we were two
so I'll keep it open, the space between!
Like this! Like this!
Not like Day Ten, not like never,
like this!

FINAL CHORUS — PROX

Through the sheath and past the pulleys,
one line from the elbow to the fingertip.

CALL AND RESPONSE — COMPANY

(Like this!)
(A little further!)
(More or less!)
(Bit less, honestly.)

TAG — PROX

A little further every daaaay!

OUTRO — KING PROFUNDUS

A whisper, my girl, every day, at the kettle and the school run,
a little further, more or less,
your old father, pulling soft.

OUTRO — PROX

Every day, Papa... a little further...

Now Open

The Company, Prox and Tip

The scene. Week twelve, a January morning and the first day of term. The finger makes a full fist round Wren's hand. Everyone takes a bow, Scarlett has been remodelled, and Mae says goodbye at the school gate.

Listen for. The opening chorus comes back with 'the lunchbox and Wren'. The space-between couplet reaches its final form. Scarlett: 'I've had work done.' 'Hold still... done. Go on.' Then the show's last words, said quietly to one hand.

INTRO — COMPANY

Week twelve, a January morning,
the first day of the term.
(Tick, tock... got it in hand...)

VERSE — COMPANY

In the left hand of Doctor Mae,
the holding hand is back.
The ring, soldered back, slides over the knuckle
now the swelling's gone.
Coffee, keys, a scarf, a coat,
a lunchbox with a dinosaur, and one small hand to hold all the way down the road.
(Whoa-oh!) Nobody's late!
(Well, nobody's VERY late.)
And her Tuesday list is back next week.
Wren calls, "Mum, hurry up!"

PRE-CHORUS — COMPANY

And the ring finger bends at the base, (Base!) it bends in the middle,
(Middle!) it bends at the very tip, curling all the way round Wren,
a fist, a whole fist, at last!

BREAK — PROX

Tip? Tip, are you there?
It's Prox, calling from the palm, down the sheath and past the pulleys,
Tip? Are you there?

BREAK — TIP

Prox. Right here. Still attached!
It's Tip, at the end of the line,
Phones! Noses! Lunchboxes!
I'm Tip, touching EVERYTHING again!

CHORUS — COMPANY

We've got it in hand! (Got it in hand!)
The coffee, the keys, the lunchbox and Wren!
We've got it in hand! (Hey!)
(We're the holding hand!)

CHORUS — COMPANY

Through the sheath and past the pulleys,
one line from the elbow to the fingertip.

VERSE — COMPANY

Up in his castle the King used to heave with all his might.
The King pulls with a whisper now,
a little, often, light.
(Light!) And all three daughters, all the way down, close tight.

RESPONSE — COMPANY

Middle, ring and little,
 we can close, Father!
 (Ooh!) We can close!
 The Pulleys take a bow:
 Ay-two, untouched!
 Ay-four, a sliver, none the worse!
 Not a bowstring in sight!
 Ay-one sighs, "Tuesdays soon. Marvellous."
 Ay-three and Ay-five: "Nobody mentions us."
 And thank you, Lumbo!
 Somebody THANKED him!
 Out loud! In public!
 He's not crying, he's a muscle!

VERSE — COMPANY

And here comes Digby, more or less, (Tap, tap.) a little further every day, rolled up at the fingertip round New Year, give or take.
 Mostly pins and needles,
 but it's HER.

INTERLUDE — PROX

Tip, listen! Scarlett purrs from the wall,
 "Still here, darling.
 Just facing the right way.
 I used to be Type Three,
 now I'm Type One,
 lined up neat, every fibre in a row.
 Don't look so shocked... I've had work done."

KEY CHANGE — COMPANY
 (Whoa-oh-oh! Whoa-oh-oh!)

FINAL CHORUS — PROX & TIP

Now we know that we are two,
 and we glide on the space between.
 Through the sheath and past the pulleys,
 one line from the elbow to the fingertip!

FINAL CHORUS — PROX

We've got it in hand! (Got it in hand!)
 The coffee, the keys, the lunchbox and Wren!
 We've got it in hand! (We're the holding hand!)
 Look at us, Tip!
 A whole fist round Wren!
 Now we know that we are two,
 and we glide on the space between!

CODA — COMPANY

At the gate, a shoelace loose,
 she kneels down on the frosty step.
 Mae says, "Hold still... done. Go on."
 (And her fingers curl and open, without her even knowing.) Wren giggles, "Mum, you're doing the weird hand thing again!"
 Wren calls as she runs, "Bye, Mum!"
 (got it in hand...)
 (And the small hand slips out of the big one,
 and runs in through the gate.)

OUTRO — PROX

And Mae, alone at the gate, says to her own hand,
 "Make a fist for me.
 Now open."

Glossary

Flexor digitorum profundus (FDP)

The deep finger-bending tendon, and the only one that bends the fingertip. Its muscle sits in the forearm. In the show that muscle is King Profundus, and Prox and Tip are the two halves of the ring-finger tendon.

Flexor digitorum superficialis (FDS)

Big Sister. The shallower tendon, which bends the middle joint. It splits to let FDP pass through and anchors on the middle bone.

Camper's chiasm

The spot where FDS splits in two and rejoins underneath FDP, which is the 'hug from beneath'. It's why the knife cut Prox and missed Big Sister.

Zone Two / No Man's Land

The stretch of finger from the palm crease to where FDS anchors. Two tendons share a tight tunnel there, so repairs tend to stick. Surgeon Sterling Bunnell named it, which is why it's 'old Doctor Bunnell's map'.

Flexor sheath

The slippery tunnel the tendons glide through. The fluid inside helps feed the tendon.

Pulleys (A1-A5)

Five ring-shaped bands that hold the tendons against the bone. A2 and A4 are the most important. A1 is the one released in trigger-finger surgery.

Bowstringing

What happens if too many pulleys are lost: the tendon lifts off the bone like a bowstring whenever the finger bends. It's weak, it looks odd, and the Pulleys find it scandalous.

Venting

Making a small cut in part of a pulley so a bulky repair can slide through without catching. A4 or part of A2, but not both.

Lumbrical

A small worm-shaped muscle that starts on the FDP tendon in the palm and helps straighten the finger joints. That's Lumbo, and he's why Prox stopped in the palm.

Lumbrical plus

A real and rather odd sign. When FDP is cut and pulls back, the muscle's pull goes through the lumbrical instead, so trying to bend the finger makes it straighten.

Quadrige effect

The middle, ring and little FDP tendons share one muscle, so if one is stuck or shortened the others can't fully close either. 'Why can't WE close, Father?'

Digital nerve

Each finger has two, one on each side, that carry feeling. After repair a nerve regrows about a millimetre a day, often with pins and needles on the way.

WALANT

Wide Awake Local Anaesthesia, No Tourniquet. The patient stays awake for the operation, so the surgeon can ask them to make a fist and watch the repair glide.

Multi-strand core repair

Several strands of suture across the tendon ends. Four is the usual minimum, and more strands are stronger. A thin running stitch around the outside keeps the join smooth.

Dorsal blocking splint

A thermoplastic splint along the back of the hand and wrist. It keeps the wrist and knuckles bent so the finger can move but can't stretch out far enough to pull the repair apart.

Place and hold

An early exercise. The good hand bends the finger, the patient gently holds it there with their own muscle, then lets go. It moves the tendon with very little force.

Goniometer

A hinged protractor for measuring joint angles. Thea's 'wand'. Nobody has ever been impressed by it.

Tinel's sign

Tapping along a regrowing nerve. The point where it tingles shows how far the nerve has grown.

Adhesion

Scar tissue that sticks the tendon to its tunnel so it can't glide. Some scarring is needed for healing; this is scarring in the wrong place.

Type III and Type I collagen / Tenolysis

Early scar is messy Type III collagen. Over time it remodels into strong, neatly aligned Type I. If adhesions still won't let go, a second operation called tenolysis frees the tendon. Mae is NOT having one.
